DAHLIAS

Visitors to our gardens were surprised to find 500 hills of dahlias growing here. Gladiolus is our hobby and our specialty. Dahlias positively will not stand abuse so we never take them far from home for exhibition purposes. They suffer too, compared with Glads for keeping quality as cut flowers. But in all justice no other small tuber will produce such a glorious wealth of bloom and the bushy plant and foliage makes a fine hedge or back ground.

This, our first attempt at listing dahlias is the cream of three hundred varieties and should delight the most critical.

For the piece de resistance for table decoration try dahlia Mrs. Edna Spencer, topped with Gladiolus Byron L. Smith or Marcella Gill with Mrs. Dr. Norton

HARDY PERENNIALS

We grow a few Shrubs and Perennials at Homewood Gardens primarily for our own pleasure and because a house becomes a home in the midst of these grand floral subjects. The city dweller with a few feet of ground can indulge in a rockery. The quiet tinkling pool with its fish and flowers is a place to linger longer, to rest, to dream, to plan for future joy. And on this dreary day the scarlet berries on my Jan. shrubs, viewed through a window, nod a cheery greeting.
